Her manner was full of pervous excitament, and he saw her delicate face flushed as she spoke. He did not know that in the midst of her eagerness she was anxiously debating the question of cab fare, aud wondering how much money it would take to have investigated the interior of the poor little purse lying at the bottom of her satchel, so slenderly furnished, yet, alas! representing nearly all the wordly wealth of its possessor, how sadly it would have confirmed the misgivings which had been excited by a glance at the well-worn cloak, and the shoes obviously unsuited for the hard service which had been required from them. Five minutes later a cab was rapwearer, and the benevolent old merchant was thoughtfully warming his hands before the office fire. She was gone, and he gained no additional knowledge of her except that she was somebody's daily governess. From that day he watched in vain for a glimpse of the red cloak; he saw it no more, and concluded that the poor young teacher was unable to continue her daily journeys. She gave him the impression of one who had to depend upon herself, but the reality might be still worse; for anything he knew might be others, even more helpless, dependent upon her. In spite of his repeated disappointments Mr. Hardman still took his post at the window, as though the habit vielded him a certain amount of pleasurable excitement which he was unable to re-

A month had passed; it was an unusu ally bright day for January, when Mr. Hardman took his seat in his comfortable brougham in company with an old medical friend, who had agreed to go home with him to dinner on condition that he would allow him to make one or more professional calls before the carriage was turned in the direction of Winchley.

Assent was readily given. "Certainly, loctor, you shall be set down wherever you wish; I shall not mind waiting in the least, for we have plenty of time on our hands The doctor was about the same age as his friend, the merchant, a portly old gentleman, with the kindest smile that could be imagined, and a benevolent face, that must have considerably helped the healing power of his prescriptions. "I will not detain you long," said the doctor, as the carriage turned into a side ninutes and the doctor had safely piloted his friend up a steep, dark staircase to the door of a close back room on third floor, where a scene of poverty and privation awaited them. Nearly all the chairs which he room contained had been put into rejuisition to form a couch, on which lay a ung man who was evidently weak and ill. Beside him sat a pale, slight creature. ousily engaged stitching at some coarse needle work. The feeble flicker of a meagre fire gleamed feebly on the faces of both. The next moment they were in the room but the old merchant stopped short on the threshold, gazing in undisguised amazement at the inmates. One glance at the features of the young wife identified the wearer of the red cloak -a discovery for which he had been half prepared, but it was the face of the husand that arrested his attention, "Bless At that moment the young man raised himself on his elbow, saying excitedly, Mr. Hardman here ?" The sound of his own name visibly startled the merchant. He hurried to the side of the impromptu couch, exclaiming:

"It is Philip Holt."
The poor fellow seemed much overcome by this unexpected visit of his old employer, who, unfortunately for him, had been absent at the time when Mr. Joyce, with whom he had never been a favorite, had ordered his dismissal. A few words put the merchant in possession of the sad story, which received double interest when he learned that the ills of poverty had been warded off by the heroic efforts of Phillip's young wife, who had gone back to her old work of teaching, ending her weary days work as she was able to obtain. Here was a new reading of his little romance of the red cloak, and it is certain that it did not lessen the interest in the wearer; but he could not readily excuse himself from the blame, which he took to his own account, for allowing his partner's dismissal of an old clerk to remain without inquiry. He determined that the injury to Philip Holt should be atoned for, and he kept his word. When the young man recovered he was restored to his old place, in which he had ample opportunities for pushing his way and gaining even the respect and confidence of Mr. Joyce.

Like a day of sunshine following a clouded morning, prosperity blessed the young couple, and the loving, patient wife

Philip always traced their good fortune to the cloak which she had worn, because t was her mother's, and from that day he decided that it should be a relic. Years afterwards, when he was a prosperous merchant, and Grace a happy matron, with children grown up around her, he would say in allusion to their early days of trial, "My darling, if you find me growing selfish and forgetful of you and my duty, show me your old red cloak; it will preach a sermon that will be sure to set all right.

Messrs. Editors :- For four years there has been an organized temperance society in this city. The members of this society have worked sedulously for the promotion of the cause of temperance; but they have received very little encouragement from the people of this community, for whose intersts they are laboring. When we contemplate this state of things we are not inordinately surprised that the secular portion of our people have not rendered the instituter than writing, and I should like to go at tion that aid which might be expected from men and women professing a desire for the dethronement of vice, and the establishment of morality. a loss to understand the actions of those persons who are allied with the Church f God. The purpose of all our rites and ceremonies is to benefit mankind morally and spiritually.-But, while these things are true we deprechurches in this city, with the exception of a few isolated cases, are not in open sympathy with the attempts that are being made to reform inebriates and indoctrinate the youth in the principles of temperance. It is said there are members in every drink. Great God! is it true, that those who wear the armor of Christ are setting examples before the young, which, if fol lowed, may result in the destruction of that physical temple, upon which the Di vine Maker imprinted the portraiture of his majesty, and the eternal ruin of the immortal soul. It is said influential members of the churches in Wilmington purchase from the liquor establishments alco hol by the gallon, and carry it to their in the practice of drinking the damnable potation. Is it possible, that men who own, with indignation at-other vices, and who pray to God for the coming of His kingdom, are guilty of introducing into their family circle the liquid of the pool from whence springs half of the vices which curse our country. If these reports be true, how can such men censure the drunkard! How can they condemn the g his establishment? Reformation is the watchword of the day. In other parts of North Carolina christians, politicians, influential and wealthy men are uniting with the reform ers. The day of fogyism has passed. As civilization marches forward it sheds an effulgence over the whole land, and reveals those customs which were once highly esteemed, as among those things which are leleterious to the best interests of a nation. The people in other portions of the State are beginning to realize these things, and are rising up, as good citizens should, and condemning the once-cherished vice of inemperance. Although strong efforts are being made to stay the progress of this portentous monster, yet the seeds of intemper ance are now being thickly sown through out the length and breadth of the land. Yea, the evil is prevalent! it steals insidiously into the palatial mansion and the rude home of the poor. Citizens, the evil is at your doors and it behooves you to drive it away. How long will you countenance intemperance In the name of the order of the Friends of Temperance, we appeal to the members of the different religious denominations in Wilmington to unite with us in our efforts to break down the bulwarks of intemperance, and establish the glorious reign of temperance. Let us confederate, and, in the name of God and country, go forth, teaching our fellow-men to reject the poisonous cup, and drink of the pure beverage which gushes in immaculate beauty from the earth. We earnestly appeal to the men of influence to join hands with us. Think not that we are a mere ouerile institution. Some of the most brilliant intellects in the State are engaged in this work, and the cause is worthy of your espousal. Lastly, we appeal to women, the sweet spirit of heavenly influence. Mr. Bledsoe's letter is published elsewhere.

IT is understood that Governor Caldwell intends to carry out the programme laid down in that famous Raleigh dispatch, and will soon announce Boards of Directors for the several charitable and penal institutions

It is reported that Anthony Howe, our colored Alderman, is to succeed Alfred Howe, who is probably not so popular with General Dockery.

And why does the French Assembly address such an enquiry to the United States government? Because the French consul at New York, Victor Place, having been tried in France for peculations and frauds in the purchase of arms, and having been found guilty, such damaging revelations were made upon his trial that the French government felt compelled to enquire further into the matter.

That government paid about twelve millions of dollars for the arms and ammunition purchased, and the vouchers produced cover only about eight millions. What has become of the other four? This is what that government desires to find

Mr. Sumner, who loves President Grant as much as the devil is said to love "holy water," has presented in the Senate a resolution of enquiry based upon the foregoing facts. This is what the French government wish to find out and why they ask for an enquiry into the conduct of suspected American officials. And in this connection the question arises how were these "strongest influences" secured? How was the difficulty of having the cartridges made at the Government arsenal "got over," as Mr. Remington says? The reply is not doubtful. Long is made up of different material, and will at any time, I make no doubt, qualify to the truthfulness of this statement. Thus it will be perceived that Mr. Pool is capable of prostituting the dignity of the State and his high office for the basest political pur-poses. Need we be surprised at this since it has become the settled purpose of the office holders throughout the country to persevere in their villainy and to sustain themselves in it by the re-election, if possible, of General Grant. Witness the ponderous frauds for political purposes recently developed and now being developed by the United States Senate Investigating Committee in the city of New York relative to Custom-house affairs is an evidence of this allegation. Isn't it alarming? But this is not all. By the promotion of this great raseal, he and W. F. WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. The majority and minority reports of the joint Ku-Klux committee of twenty-one will be presented to Congress on Monday. The majority, as is well known, will sub mit several thousand pages of printed evidence of so-called Ku-Klux outrages, defend the Ku-Klux law of Congress, and recommend the continuance of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus beyond the time to which it is now restricted. It will to a certain extent agree with the report of the minority that the carpet-bas governments of the South have plus and robbed the Southern people until lawlessness was provoked. "The aggregate increase of the debts and liabilities of the Southern States will be found greatly to exceed $200,000,000. In this fearful account no notice whatever has been taken of the debt contracted during the war, as all indebtedness in aid of the relection was repudiated by the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution. The systematic system of robbery pursued through the medium of local taxation was the exciting cause which led to the disturbances which did actually occur. The report says upon this .

This character of larcency committed in neighborhoods caused more disturbances than all the wholesale plunder of the States; it came home to every man's door it was seen and felt every day and hour; i was a festering sore on the body politic and the offenders were sometimes pretty roughly dealt with, while sometimes they professed to have been 'Ku-Kluxed' to hid their own villainy."

Looking over some of the items of reck less expenditure, it is discovered that some of the officials were remarkably kind to inmates of the penitentiary, for in South Carolina it appears that $12,536 71 was expended for hired labor in that building notwithstanding the fact that between two and three hundred convicts, a majority of whom were colored men, were, during the year, living in that institution at the ex pense of the State. Speaking of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus in nine of the counties of South Carolina, the minority says:

"We have no means of knowing upon what specific information, if any, the President has suspended the writ of habeas corpus in nine of the counties of South Caro lina, because up to this time he has failed to respond to the resolution of the House of Representatives upon that subject. With our opportunities of knowing what has and what has not transpired in South Carolina since the passage of the law to enforce the 14th amendment of the constitution, we are bold to say that the exercise of this usurped dominion over the great writ of right of the people, falsely claimed to be rightfully delegated to the President by act of Congress. is wholly unsupported by any state of facts which would justify its sus-pension, even by the rightful trustees of the power under the constitution." The report closes with an arraignment of the President in the following words: "It is a painful duty to arraign the Chief Magistrate of the republic before the great tribunal of the people. It would have been a much more pleasant task, in a crisis which should hush into silence all mere party criticism, to represent him to that court of last resort as having performed his high trust, in relation to the Southern troubles. with moderation, justice, wisdom and the strictest impartiality; and that, under a the government, peace and harmony had been restored between the people of the two sections; and that all the bitterness and rankling animosities of a great civil war had been lost and absorbed in the proud recollections of a joint struggle for inde-pendence and liberty, and the common glory of the earlier and better days of the Whereas, by the 3d Section of the Naturalization Act 1870 (33 Vict. cap. 14) it is provided that "where Her Majesty has entered into a convention with any foreign State to the effect that the subjects or citizens of that State who have been naturalized as British subjects, may divest themselves of their status as such subjects, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by Order in Council, to declare that such convention has been entered in the Majesty, and tion has been entered into by Her Majesty; and from and after the date of such Order in Coun-cil, any person being originally a subject or citi-zen of the State referred to in such Order, who has been naturalized as a British subject, may, within such limit of time as may be provided in the convention, make, a declaration of allowed

State to which he originally belonged as aforesaid.

"A declaration of alienage may be made as follows, that is to say: If the declarant be in the United Kingdom, in the presence of any justice of the peace; if elsewhere in Her Majeaty's dominions in the presence of any judge of any court of civil or criminal jurisdiction, of any court of civil or criminal jurisdiction, of any justice of the peace, or of any other officer for the time being authorized by law, in the place in which the declarant is, to administer an oath for any judicial or other legal purpose. If out of Her Majesty's dominions, in the presence of any officer in the Diplomatic or Consular service of Her Majesty.

AND WHEREAS, such convention was entered into by Her Majesty with the United States of America, on the 13th of May 1870, the ratifications of which were exchanged at Lordon on the 10th August, 1870, in and on the 17th day of August, 1870, ther Majesty, by Order in Council, did declare that a convention had been entered into, to the effect that the subjects or citizens of those States who had been naturalized as British subjects might divest themselves of their status as such subjects.

tered into, to the effect that the subjects or citizens of those States who had been naturalized as British subjects might divest themselves of their stotus as such subjects.

AND WHEREAS, by a supplementary convention signed at Washington on 23d February, 1871, the ratifications whereof were exchanged on the 4th May, 1871 AFTER RECITING that by the second article of the said first convention it had been stipulated that the MANNER, in which the renunciation by subjects and citizens of the contracting parties who had emigrated or might emigrate from the dominions of one to those of the other party, of their naturalization and the resumption of their nature allegiance, might be made and publicly declared, should be agreed upon by the Governments of the respective countries: IT was, by Article 1, Agreed, as follows, viz: That any person being originally a citizen of the United States who had previously to May 13, 1870, been naturalized as a British subject, may at any time before August 10, 1872, and any British subject, who, at the date first aforesaid, had been naturalized as a citizen within the United States.

ist? and any British subject, who, at the date first aforesaid, had been naturalized as a citizen within the United States, may, at any time before May 12, 1872, publicly declare his renunciation of such naturalization by subscribing an instrument in writing, substantially in the form hereunto appended, and designated as Annex A. the form hereunto appended, and designated as Annex A.

"Such renunciation by an original citizen of the United States of British nationality shall, within the territories and jurisdiction of the United States, be made in duplicate, in the presence of any Court authorized by law for the time being to admit aliens to naturalization, or before the Clerk or Prothonotary of any such Court: if the declarant be beyond the territories of the United States, it shall be made in duplicate, before any Diplomatic or Consular officer of the United States. One of such duplicates shall remain of record in the custody of the Court or officer in whose presence it was made; the other shall be, without delay, transmitted to the Department of State.

"Such renunciation, it declared by an original British subject, of his acquired nationality as a citizen of the United States, shall, if the declarant be in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, be made in duplicate, in the presence of a Justice of the Peace; if elsewhere, in Her Britannie Majesty's dominions, in triplicate, in the presence of any Justice of the Peace, or of any other officer for the time being authorized by law, in the place in which the declaration is, to administer an oath for any judicialor other legal purpose; if out of Her Majesty's dominions, in triplicate, in the presence of any officer in the Diplomatic or Consular Service of Her Majesty."

Swepson carried the bonds North, raised $500,000 on them, and leaving the new railroad to take care of itself, ran off with his plunder to Florida. There he fell into hands of shrewder rascals than himself, and was stripped of the most of his booty; whereupon, with the assistance of Governor Reed, he repeated the game which had been so successful in North Carolina, and the Legislature was induced to issue $5,000,000 in bonds for building a certain railroad in Flori la. Of this sum $125,000 was expended on the railroad, while the remainder went into the pockets of Swepson and his confederates. Thus two States

dent declared that he would consent to no modification of the American case it was supposed that the people would rally enthusiastically to his support, and in a new patriotic excitement a multitude of old differences would be forgotten. This hope has not been justified by the event. The Administration has been injured rather than reinforced by the Alabama difficulty, and whatever may be thought of the merits of our claim, there can hurdly be two Mr. J. W. Akers, of this city, who recently intelligent opinions about the matter in which it has been presented. The question of indirect damage has been the essence of our dispute with England for years, and it was the very first point propounded in the conferences of the Joint High Commission n Washington which led to the adoption the extraordinary fact that this vital disagreement is still left open, so that the Treaty, which was published in the Enquirer, we which was supposed to have tled everything, has really settled days of ex-President Andrew Jackson and nothing at all? In the absence of some his studies in this office under Judge Spruce think we are bound to assume that the English Minister is sincere in declaring that it does not understand claims for consequential damages to be embraced in the questions referred by the treaty to the tribunal of arbitration. I am assured, indeed, by a member of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, that the British Commissioners certainly went home with the belief that those claims had been excluded. They were claims which Great Britain had always refused to submit to arbitration, just as we refused on our side to submit claims for the Confederate cotton loan or the Fenian raids. And if they were to be considered, they ought certainly to have been distinctly recognized either in the protocols or the text of the treaty. "But the most you can say," added the Senator whom I have already quoted, "is that the treaty does not expressly rule them out." The importance of a distinct understanding on be awarded only for the natural and proximate consequences of an act—a rule which us by the actions and omissions of Great but all of them the natural and proximate consequences of wrongful actions. The case presented by our counsel at Geneva has not only overlooked this disinction, but has pressed claims for remote and inferential losses which not even the most sanguine American could hope to see recognized. It asks the British Gov. ernment not only to pay for our lost commerce and our high rates of marine insurance, but to bear all the expenses of the war after the battle of Gettysburg. The excuse for making such enormous demands posed to render them their assistance. The probably is that the arbitrators may be readier to award us our legal dues when they have heard the whole list of grievances in which the legal demand figures as a single item. But, as any one might have foreseen, the result has been to prevent any arbitration whatever. No British

"In case of arbitration," says one of the Justices of the United States Supreme Court, "it is a general rule that the arbitrators must decide all questions that arise respecting their own jurisdiction. The obvious course in this dispute is for the Geneva tribunal to determine whether the Treaty justifies the presentation of claims for indirect damages, and then to proceed with the arbitration. If either party believes that the arbitrators exceed their powers, that will be a subject for negotiation after the award." An effort will, no doubt, be made to follow this course-Hostetter's Bitters is the purest, the safest, the with what success depends upon the temmost powerful and perfect in vigorant ever ad- per of the British public rather than the ministered, either as protective medicine or a disposition of the British Ministry. THE LONDON TIMES ON THE QUESTION OF INDIRECT TAXES

From the Times of January 26. No doubt it was from an honorable de. sire to avoid every topic of difference which could possibly be avoided that Lord Ripon and his colleagues failed to insist on an explicit definition of "the Claims generically known as the Alabama Claims," notwithstanding that Great Britain, and Great Britain alone, was liable to suffer by any vagueness in this essential article. The protocol of May 4, 1871, however, coupled with the provisions of subsequent articles, directing that each vessel shall be the subshow that claims for indirect losses were not contemplated in laying down the losses are admissible in respect to all the question left open by the treaty, and therefore properly cognizable by the arbitrators. house; but mother told me to tell you that it isn't catchin'." The teacher said that on the relevance of the presumptive argument against Great Britain. But it is not so evident, nor are we prepared to admit that it is a question for the arbitrators at all, whether Great Britain the aris responsible for damages for the general war expenses incurred by the United States after the battle of Gettysburg. It is certain that, had the intention to press such a demand been understood on both sides at > conferences to an abrupt conclusion. Not only would it have been impossible for Great Britain to place on record the expression of regret to which the United States naturally attached so much weight, and to acquiesce in the retrospective application of the new rules; not only must our Commissioners have insisted on the right to plead a set-off on account of the Fenian raids and other national injuries, instead of referring the Alabama claims to arbitration by themselves, but it would have been their duty to suspend all further negotiations till a distinct waiver of indirect losses should
